WHO LAUNCHES NEW PENIS

The World Health Organisation today unveiled its new penis, which it claims is healthier and sturdier than current models.

The penis is moulded in hygenic latex and has settings for both urination and intercourse. It is smaller and more streamlined than a traditional penis (measuring a mere 9 inches) and looks likely to become popular with fashion-conscious men.

The penises go on sale on Monday, with most outlets operating a 'trade-in' programme.

BRITAIN'S OLDEST GHOST DIES

Vyncent Massingberde, who has haunted Metcalfe Abbey and its environs for the last 650 years, died yesterday after a prolonged chest infection.

A local grocer said "To be honest, we're all relieved he's gone. I hardly had any customers because of him - he was really terrifying. And whenever he materialized, there was a tremendous stench - like rotten dung. But he will be missed".

Mr. Massingberde leaves behind a spirit widow and two poltergeists.

BILLIONAIRE GIVES ANT FACELIFT

John Paul Getty, the world's richest man, has hired a team of top microsurgeons to 'nip and tuck' the face of his favourite pet ant, Gatsby.

The operation, which was performed at the Beverly Hills General Hospital, consisted of smoothing out wrinkles and tightening the skin around the eyes and mandibles to give a more youthful look.

The ant, who was 60 this year, is the tycoon's constant companion, and advises him in a type of ant 'morse code'.

NINE DAY WEEK

Speaking at the House of Commons today, the Prime Minister outlined his plans for a new nine day week.

"If Britain is to increase productivity and compete with its European neighbours, then Themsday, Trilsday, Glensday, and Hamiltonsday are a necessity", said Mr. Jekyll.

The PM branded Portugal's adoption of the system "a real success story" but stopped short of praising Japan's controversial 365 day week.

THAT'S A RICE CAR!

Scientists in China have built the first car that can run off a bowl of rice.

The scientists discovered that when an electro-magnetic pulse was fired through a glass prism, an enormous magnetic field is created. Once the magnetic field is harnessed, it is forced back through the rice, creating enough power to drive a standard car for up to 5 furlongs.

A prototype, 'The Locust 15' was unveiled on Saturday at a public ceremony in Beijing, during which the Chinese Premier drove the vehicle through a flaming hoop.

OWL ABOUT THAT

A Californian man has fulfilled his lifelong ambition and married an owl.

42 year old Lenny Taylor was officially married to a 3 year old tawny owl named Tammy at an LA church on Sunday.

Californian marriage law states that individuals are permitted to take an animal as their wedded partner but this is the first time a bird of prey has been involved.

The ceremony was attended by a number of Mr Taylor's friends and family, along with Tammy the owl's offspring, Tammahey and Tammahoo. Also in attendance was British comedy star Mike Yarwood.

DR CUMP ANSWERS YOUR LETTERS THIS WEEK: SELF CONFIDENCE

Dear Doctor, next week I have to give a big speech in front of 200 colleagues in a large hall. I have always been absolutely terrified of speaking in public, and I do not know how I am going to cope on the big day. I worry that I might even faint. Do you have any advice at all? Please help me. Mr Billy Brightman, London

HEALTH MATTERS

WITH DR ANN COMP

Dear Billy,

The key to public speaking is to be relaxed. So, if you're still feeling nervous when you get up to give your speech, a good way to relax is to imagine what your audience would look like if they were skeletons. If that doesn't work, imagine them as bundles of tissue, sinew and muscle tissue. Finally, and as a last resort, imagine them as buckets of blood. Good luck!
